MSRP: $75

FD1071*, FD5071* - The "Pepper-Box" revolver is known for its unique design and repeating action. The pepper-box revolver contains multiple barrels that revolve around a central axis and fire in turn as they align with the hammer. These guns were popular during the 1830's and 40's and were commonly carried as self-defense weapons. Available in Pewter and Black & Gold Finishes.

FD1142*

1859 Sharps Carbine

Black Finish

Specifications:

Overall: 42 1/4"

Weight: 6lbs 5oz

MSRP: $192

FD1142* - In the mid-1800's, Christian Sharps developed a series of large bore single shot rifles that were renowned for long-range accuracy. The carbine version was a very popular choice for Union and Confederate Armies and was issued in larger numbers than its full-length counterpart. By 1863, it was the most common weapon carried by Union cavalry regiments.

FD1141

1859 Sharps Military Rifle

Pewter Finish

Specifications:

Overall: 56"

Weight: 7lbs 11oz

MSRP: $216

FD1141 - The full-length counterpart to the Sharps Carbine. This rifle was known for its firing accuracy. Because of its unmatched accuracy, the Sharps Military Rifle was heavily used in the Civil War by U.S. Army Marksman.

FD1253L

1873 Lever-Action Rifle

Engraved Gold Finish

Specifications:

Overall: 14 3/4"

Weight: 2lbs 15oz

MSRP: $215

FD1253 - The repeating rifle first entered production in 1860 and was one of the first repeating rifles to use metallic cartridges. It fired a .44 caliber rimfire cartridge and had a 15-round magazine. Its firepower was far superior to its contemporaries. Almost 13,000 of these rifles were made between 1860 and 1866 but it saw relatively little Civil War service.

FD1046* - The Enfield "Short Rifle" was a percussion-lock rifle used extensively by both the North and South in the Civil War. It was generally well regarded for its accuracy and reliability.

FD1067

1853 Three-Band Enfield Percussion Rifle

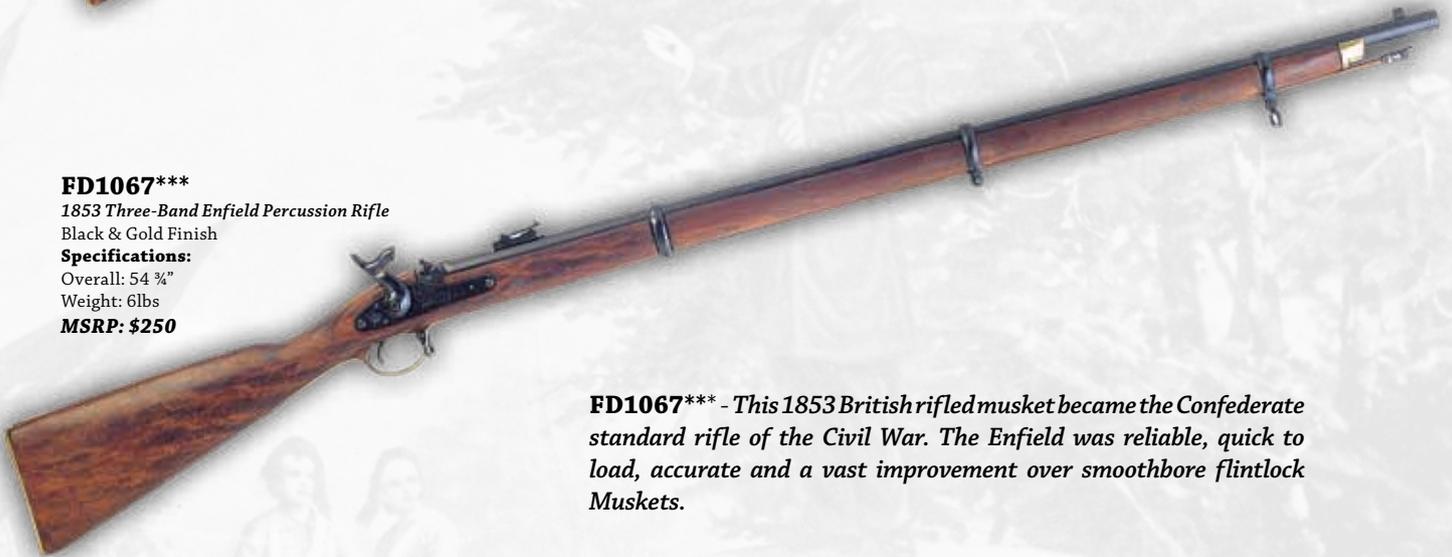

Black & Gold Finish

Specifications:

Overall: 54 ¾"

Weight: 6lbs

MSRP: $250

FD1067 - This 1853 British rifled musket became the Confederate standard rifle of the Civil War. The Enfield was reliable, quick to load, accurate and a vast improvement over smoothbore flintlock Muskets.

FD1018G*

Baby Philadelphia Derringer

Engraved Brass & Pewter Finish

Specifications:

Overall: 6 ½"

Weight: 1lb

Barrel Length: 2 ½"

MSRP: $44

FD1018G* - This Baby Philadelphia Derringer, only 6.5 inches in length, is similar to the piece that John Wilkes Booth used to assassinate President Lincoln in Ford's Theater in 1865. This easily concealable pistol was a popular commodity among gamblers and cardsharks during the Civil War Era.

Pirates of the 18th century carried firing weapons similar to these non-firing flintlock pistol replicas. The original flintlocks were very popular among pirates and commonly used during raiding exploits. Such skirmishes rarely included time for reloading, so raiders often carried a cutlass to accompany the pistol. Because of its ability to fire multiple projectiles from a single powder charge, the blunderbuss became the weapon of choice for short-range encounters with the miscreants of the 17th and 18th centuries.

Historical Replica Weaponry

FD1036, FD1037*: The French flintlock rifle, from the late 1700's and early 1800's, saw service on the European battlefields of the Napoleonic Wars. This non-firing version is accurately detailed and has been used in several movies in infantry battle scenes.

FD1054: The "Brown Bess" was one of the most renowned flintlock muskets ever produced. The gun was made for over a century and was one of the most significant firearms of the American Revolutionary War. The musket weighed a hefty 15 pounds with its bayonet, and fired a ball three quarters of an inch in diameter! This non-firing version is accurately detailed and comes complete with its removable bayonet.

FD1137*: Originally designed and built in Pennsylvania in the late 1700s. The Kentucky Long Rifle was popular from the Revolutionary War to well into the 19th century. The rifle played an integral role during early western expansion and is most often associated with Daniel Boone and Davy Crockett. The Kentucky rifle was one of the first guns to feature a "rifled" bore which made it extremely accurate for its time.

The original of this non-firing replica of the .357 Smith & Wesson Magnum was first introduced in 1937. The .357 followed Colt's .38 Special which, at the time, was the only American-made pistol cartridge with the firing capability to defeat car armour and ballistic vests. The .357's power made it very popular during the gangster era of the 1930's and has been a popular weapon of choice since.

A similar version was highlighted in the 1971 film "Dirty Harry". Each replica is equipped with functioning hammer and revolving cartridge action.

FD1122*, FD1120* - The "U.S. Carbine Cal. 30, M1" is one of the U.S. military's most-produced firearm ever. It was heavily used by US troops during WWII with variations that saw action through Korea and into the early years of Vietnam War. The M1 is a favorite among collectors. Available with or without sling in the 1941 and 1944 models.

FD1131*, FD1132* - In response to the need for a smaller, more maneuverable weapon for U.S. Airborne troops, the M1 carbine was fitted with a folding stock in 1942. This "Paratrooper model" was designated the "M1A1" and various versions were used through WWII and into the Vietnam Era. These models are based on the 1941 and 1944 M1 models. ^^Our Denix Miniature Medieval Catapult is a replica of Catapults capable of throwing large objects have existed since Roman times, and though this miniature from Denix replicates an 11th century piece the design had changed little over the intervening period. Capable of throwing anything from rocks to fireballs to dead horses (and lately pianos!), these implements were used in besieging wall-enclosed cities and surely struck terror into the citizenry.
